MOTOPED DIY MOTORBIKE KIT

Motoped is a DIY motorized bike kit that you assemble yourself using a XR50/pitbike engine and standard mountain bike components. It uses a Honda xr50 or chinese pitbike engine and downhill mountain bike parts mounted to a custom frame and swing arm.

Motoped will provide you with a detailed list of off-the-shelf motorcycle and mountain bike parts that you will need to complete the build. The basics are a Honda xr50/pit bike 50-190cc motor, gas tank, seat and a few other motorcycle parts, the mountain bike parts include forks, brakes, wheels, tires, cranks, and pedals.

SINGLE-SERVE RESEALABLE WINE POUCH

Nuvino is a radical departure in winemaking. Curated from four internationally renowned wine regions, Nuvino single-serve pouches can be enjoyed anywhere at anytime. The lightweight, unbreakable pouch requires no corkscrew to open and is ideal for use anywhere bulky, heavy glass containers are undesirable. Bring Nuvino outdoors, to the beach or to a concert under the stars. One glass at a time.

PINT SIZE SLEEPING BAG

The Spark is an ultra light bag with several key uses with one of the best warmth for weight minimalist sleeping bags available.

Its balance of size, weight and warmth make it excellent as a summer sleeping bag, especially for weight and space conscious cycle tourers and ultra light walkers. Its size and warmth rating works well as a liner bag, slipping inside another sleeping bag to add one or two seasons to its rating. The Spark compresses so small to pint size.

SPECIAL WINDOW INCREASES AIR FLOW

The act of opening a window may help ventilate a room, but it also lets in a lot of outdoor noise such as the honking and revving of traffic. A new window could help, as it's claimed to bring in more fresh air than a conventional open window, while still keeping out unwanted sounds.

Developed by scientists at the National University of Singapore, the Acoustic Friendly Ventilation Window (AFVW) measures 1.8 m high by 0.88 m wide by 0.15 m thick (5.9 by 2.9 by 0.5 ft). It's also double-glazed – this means it's made up of two 0.6 cm-thick (0.2 inch) panes of glass, with an 8.5-cm (3.3-in) air gap between them.

There are two horizontal louvered vents built into the assembly, one above the actual glass window itself, and one below it. The bottom vent is open to the outdoors, while the top vent opens into the room. An electric ventilation unit (basically a cylindrical fan) in the lower vent draws fresh air in from outside, pushing it up through the air gap between the panes, and out of the top vent into the building.

BÜRNSTER MAKES A FLEXIBLE CAMPER VAN

More and more camper brands have realized that many customers don't want a big, ugly RV rotting away in their driveways for 3/4 of the year. They'd much rather have a small multipurpose vehicle to use every day of the year, including as a camper.

Not long after similar product debuts like the Crosscamp Lite and VanTourer Urban, German motorhome manufacturer Bürstner launches its own take on the multipurpose mini-camper van. Its Ford Transit Custom rolls onto the road as a six-seat business van, two-person adventure gear-hauler, four-person camper van and open cargo van. It's a highly compelling rig for those who want a compact van that's much more than a camper.

FOLDABLE SOLAR CELL

Picture solar panels, and you're most likely picturing a solid square slab. But the tech is becoming more flexible, and now engineers at Pusan National University in Korea have developed prototype solar cells that are fully foldable.

Rigid solar cells are great for sticking on rooftops and huge solar farms, but they could use a little more flexibility to make it easier to transport them, or get the tech into vehicles, phones, indoor devices, or even clothing.

In recent years, flexible solar cells have shown promise for all of these kinds of applications. They're usually made of thin-film materials like graphene, tungsten diselenide, or copper indium gallium selenide (CIGS), deposited onto flexible substrates like polymers or even paper. The result is a solar cell that can bend to a limited degree, like a card.

ELECTRIC SCOOTER TROLLEY

There are doubtless many people who ride an electric scooter to the grocery store, then switch to a shopping cart once they get there. The Singaporean-designed Mimo C1 simplifies things, by combining both functions in one transformable vehicle.

When heading out to the store – or to a delivery destination, or wherever else – the user stands on the back half of the scooter, holding onto its handlebars and pressing its throttle switch. One charge of the removable lithium battery should reportedly be good for a range of 15 to 25 km (9 to 16 miles), at a top speed of 25 km/h (16 mph). A coil spring front suspension helps smooth out the ride, with a rear mechanical disc brake providing stopping power.

MODERN FOLD-OUT PET BED

Perfect for large dogs or multiple smaller dogs, these beds provide your pampered pets a comfortable bed when needed but fold up into a stylish piece of furniture when not in use. This modern design allows for space saving in smaller spaces and chic style anywhere.

Originally debuting at the Austin, Texas Barkitecture event benefitting local pet charities in the fall of 2012, this unique dog bed received much acclaim and the distinct award of “Best Urban Dwelling”.
